

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS

In this chapter of writing, the writer to draws some conclusions and provide Suggestions based on data analysis and discussion of politeness strategies in dialogue from the War Room Movie Transcript.

1.1 Conclusion

The results of this study indicate that there are five politeness strategies in the dialogue from the war room film transcript. The data are classified into types of politeness strategies according to Brown & Levinson theory. They are Bald on the Record, Positive Politeness, Negative Politeness, off record and Don't do the face threatening acts (FTAs).

1. Bald on Record is used as a simple imperative sentence, used to get maximum conversational efficiency.
2. Positive Politeness strategy use as social acceleration, this strategy use to get closer to the hearer.
3. negative politeness strategy use as social brake, someone use this strategy to keep distance to the hearer.
4. Off Record strategy use as indirect communication, someone use this strategy to hearer can interpret the meaning of the speaker's speech
5. Don't do the face threatening acts (FTAs) use as is simply avoid offending and imposing the hearer, also maintain a positive face and negative face while interacting with others through verbal and non-verbal communication.

From the analysis in the previous chapter, it is known that the characters in the film use politeness theory on various occasions, although not all sentences are spoken politeness strategies. In this film, the screenwriter unconsciously uses politeness strategies in every scene that is suitable to be applied if it is related to the situation in the context of the scene.
