

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

This chapter deals with the conclusion and suggestion related to the research finding and discussion. for the purpose, the research will explain the conclusion or research problem and suggestion to the parents and the further researcher .

5.1 Conclusion

From the data that writer analyzed, according to the research problem mentioned in chapter 1, the conclusion can be arranged the research question is what are the characteristics of young learners play group?

Based on the results of the research, the author found that there are six (6) characteristics that the author encountered at the Tunas Gloria playgroup.

The six characteristics are described as follows:

Where the student The research found that the characteristics of young learners play group that follows are : the first character is the activities are not interesting and engaging enough, young learners get bored easily. The children will behave as they are and are not good at pretending. They will freely express their thoughts and feelings without caring about the responses of those around them. As seen in the Tuna Gloria study group students, the children there behave as they are, spontaneous in speaking and also acting.

The second is the student may understand what is being said without necessarily understanding every individual word. They may not only guess and interpret what is being uttered but they also respond. The third is the students are characterized by curiosity and enthusiasm. They like to make sense of the world around them through engaging and motivating activities where they have to discover by themselves rather than being told. and sometimes Tunas Gloria learners, both male and female, on average show an active and energetic attitude. They look so cheerful and energetic when doing an activity, such as when told to sing, they will very energetically sing a song. Early childhood is always moving and can never be still unless they are asleep. They tend to see things from their own point of view and based on their own understanding. They also think all the things they want belong to them. In general, children are still egocentric; they see the world from their own perspective and interests. This can be observed when children fight over playing with each other, or cry when they want something but are not fulfilled.

5.2 Suggestion

Based on conclusion above, the suggestion related to the research findings are effort for the teacher support and the other researcher. the researcher hope that are the result of this study can be used as experiences and reference for the other reseacher.

These are the suggestion:

1. for the teacher

The teacher must to always continue to provide support and understanding to parents regarding parental involvement in guiding and nurturing children's character development.

2. for the next researcher

Learn more, and understand about the young learners characteristics play group. if you want to be a good researcher find out something and interest to develop.

3. for the readers

Find more information that can develop understanding about young learners characteristics.
